One of the most imposing structures in the neighborhood and one that perhaps represents the Golden Age of house building in Memphis is the mansion at 1822 Overton Park Avenue between McLean and Hawthorne. Majestically occupying an entire city block, the old Galloway home, alternately known as the Memphis College of Music and the Southwestern College of Music, is of interest as a showplace of building craftsmanship, as well as an historical monument. In March it took on added interest when Southwestern announced that the property would be sold to developers.

The four-acre plot lay vacant at the turn of the century, while the surrounding area known as "Evergreen Subdivision" was taking form. In 1905, however, Robert Galloway, president of Galloway Coal Company, built the three-story mansion that soon became one of the showplaces of the South.

The house itself combines several different architectural styles resulting in what might best be described as "modified Greek Revival." It features four Ionic columns enclosing a semi-circular porch and supporting a second-floor balcony from which one can survey the grounds and beyond. Above this is the ballroom which covers the entire third floor (and is temporarily partitioned into rooms). In its construction steel was used freely, something not often done in residential buildings, to reinforce the floors and interior trim.

Other features include a solarium on the east side of the house with ceiling and shutters of latticework that opens onto a garden, a fireplace mantel supported by life-size carved figures, extensive hardwood trim and cloth-covered walls. The stable, taken for the Interstate, contained living quarters for college credit (it had as many as 60 full-time students in its 40s) the school taught private lessons. It was the first music school in the state to be allowed to grant credit toward high school graduation. During the period the house was used for this purpose, numerous prominent people were associated with it both as instructors and students.

With the completion of a new music building in 1970, the school was moved to the Southwestern campus. This move left the Galloway mansion vacant and, except for its occasional use for a party or as a benefit "haunted house," it remains so today. At present a few Southwestern students reside there as a deterrent to vandals.

The transfer of the music department to the main campus left the house without a function, and it has begun to show its age. The tile roof needs repairing, and leakage has ruined the entire third floor. The attractiveness of the site was also detracted from when expressway right-of-way took about one-fourth of the property. Since Southwestern could no longer use the building and it had become a drain on resources, the school was faced with the prospect of selling it. Although the building was not openly on the market, Southwestern has sought a buyer for the past three years. During this period various parties expressed an interest with some seeking the building for use as a school. This use, however, has been precluded by the house's inability to meet fire regulations. Other uses have been proposed — as a tennis club, for example — but none of these plans ever proved workable.

In March Southwestern announced that it had signed a contract with two Memphians for the purchase of the land. Gary Rose Belz, associated with Belz Enterprises, Inc., and F.L. Billings are the prospective owners, the latter being involved in house moving and demolition. The sale price of the land was quoted at "considerably in excess of $100,000" but is contingent on the buyers having the land rezoned to an R-3A classification.

At present the area is zoned R-2 which allows only single-family dwellings. An R-3A zone would allow garden apartments with a density up to 17 units per acre. This would involve the widening of McLean at this point, a change already in the city plans. Early reports stated that the mansion itself might be remodeled for use as a residence, but most observers doubt the feasibility of such an endeavor. A former prospective buyer has indicated that $25-30,000 worth of repairs would be necessary to preserve the house, and such an investment is unlikely.

It would be unfortunate for the neighborhood to lose such an imposing landmark and, with uncertainty still surrounding the future of the expressway, any definite plans for the property now might be premature. If harsh practicalities do dictate that some better use be made of the land, let us hope that the new owners and the Vollintine/Evergreen community will take a close look at the long-range implications of any new development in the neighborhood.

Gossip

On March 31, at Scott Air Force Base Mrs. BEATRICE WILLIAMS and JAMES, JR., of 923 N. Garland welcomed their husband and father, Captain JAMES WILLIAMS, back from VIETNAM. Captain Williams, an Air Force navigator has been a POW since his plane was shot down over North Vietnam on May 20, 1972. Mrs. Williams is a substitute special education teacher at Hyde Park School, and James, Jr., 8, attends Springdale School.

Another Vietnam veteran, CWO ROBIN McCARTY of 1038 Oakmont, experienced a forced landing when his National Guard CH-34 helicopter had an engine failure near Memphis recently. According to Mr. McCarty, the landing wasn’t as tense as being downed by enemy fire. Mr. McCarty is a senior at Springdale School.

DR. JULIUS MELTON, his wife ANN, and CAMBRIA, 10, CATHERINE, 9, and WILL, 2, are leaving 306 Hawthorne for Davidson, North Carolina, where Dr. Melton will be Director of Deferred Giving at Davidson College. Dr. Melton has served at Southwestern for ten years, first as Vice-President for Student Affairs and later as Director of Deferred Gifts. He has been active in VECANDA, most recently as a member of the education committee.

The second-grade class of Mrs. BOBBIE SMOTHERS won the first semester paper drive at Snowden School. The class is now at Vollentine, but a tree will be planted in its name on the Snowden grounds.

DOUG BARKER, formerly of 2124 Vollentine, is now living in Walnut Creek, California where he teaches Bible to high school students in a coffee house. The coffee house, called "The Place", is sponsored by a church in the San Francisco Bay area. Readers may recall Doug’s interviews of postman HILLARY REDRICK and fireman DANNY WAHLQUIST which he wrote for the Evergreen News while a student at Memphis State.

Meet The Neighbors

A Rap With The Rep

by Hershel Lipow

State Representative HARPER BREWER is an affable man who finds his work in Tennessee's 88th General Assembly always interesting, often amusing, and, at times, quite frustrating. Mr. Brewer, who has resided at 990 N. Idelwild for three years now, is a native Memphian. When not serving in the legislature, he is a science teacher at Frayser High School. He and his wife Peggy attend Mt. Moriah Baptist Church. Peggy, also a native Memphian, teaches fifth grade at Snowden School. The Brewers have one child, Kimberly, who is four years old.

Mr. Brewer is a member of VECAA and has much praise for the organization. He believes it is of great political import. Citing the recent efforts to stop work on the median strip of Jackson Avenue, he feels VECAA should "work as a vehicle for people to come together to utilize their diverse talents in achieving common goals."

Reporting on legislative activities, Mr. Brewer cites the spending of state surplus monies and revenue sharing funds as the primary task awaiting the Assembly. "Since the appropriation bills will appear late in the session, great care must be given not to overlook these bills in the haste of closing the session," Mr. Brewer, who is on the House Financial Ways and Means and General Welfare committees, can be counted on to see these bills through.

Commenting on Governor Dunn's housing development program, Mr. Brewer expressed hope that a modified proposal could be passed. He feels the proposal is admirable and is not in any sense a "give away". By providing a subsidy to mortgage interest payments he believes a greater segment of those very near to purchasing a home can be given the incentive to buy moderately priced houses.

Mr. Brewer is less optimistic that no-fault insurance and the "circuit breaker" welfare reform proposal will be passed. He doesn't believe that the proposed 15% mandatory reduction on personal injury insurance premiums will be of any benefit unless other premium costs such as those on property damage are regulated. He also expressed the need for a compulsory liability program to replace the present financial responsibility system. As for welfare reform, Mr. Brewer stated that state Democrats will seek to replace the "circuit breaker" proposal of refunds to indigents with a more comprehensive Medicaid program. The plan calls for the proposed $12.5 million state funding to be matched with a 3 to 1 federal categorical grant.

Mr. Brewer takes an active interest in local affairs and hopes to run for his second term in office. He believes that all Shelby Countians should work together and invites everyone to make his views known to him.

Welcome

The smallest "newcomer" to be welcomed this month is Roger Sean Cooper who weighed nine pounds and two ounces when he was born on February 22. His parents are Roger and Lou Anne Cooper of 1856 Vollintine. Mr. Cooper is news director for radio station WREC.

JAMES and LIBBY DAUGHRDILL are the new residents of Southwestern's president's home at 671 West Drive. Mr. Daughdrill comes to Southwestern with a background in both business and the ministry, having served most recently as Secretary of Stewardship for the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. Their children are RISHA, 16, GAY, 5, and a son, HAL, 17, who plans to enter Southwestern as a freshman this fall.

Two newcomers to the neighborhood are PEGGY WARRINGTON and KATHY MARCROM, both of the University Cabanas. Formerly classmates at the U.T. Medical Units, Kathy comes to the neighborhood after a year in Nashville, while Peggy is moving in from Whitehaven. Both are dental hygienists working in private dental practices.

Welcome to BARBARA STAGGS who moved recently to the University Cabanas. Miss Staggs teaches an academic adjustment class at Riverview School. She grew up in Memphis and is a graduate of Memphis State University.

New residents of the garage apartment at 407 Stonewall are Mrs. MARTHA TAYLOR and her eight-year-old son, TODD. "Marty" comes to the V/E community from Whitehaven and is employed as assistant bookkeeper by Central States Dredging Co. Todd is a second-grader at Vollentine School.
