ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This history was made possible by grants from the Tennessee Committee for the Humanities, Inc., an affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities, and from the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation to the Metropolitan Inter-Faith Association.

The findings and conclusions herein do not necessarily represent the views of the Tennessee Committee for the Humanities, Inc., the National Endowment for the Humanities, or the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation.

The project staff appreciates the continued generous encouragement from the Project Director, Jeanne Tackett, and the Advisory Committee members:

Mrs. Ray Allen  Professor Howard Sims
Dr. Granville Davis  Rev. Gid Smith
Mr. Robert Dempsey  Dr. Bernice White
Dr. Fred Neal  Dr. Don Mikula

MIFA also wishes to thank Gilbert Delugach, retired builder; Joe Hough, real estate economist; and David Sojourner of the Memphis Board of Education for their willingness to go the extra mile in helping us with our research. A very special thanks is due Margaret Dichtel for her patience and helpfulness in supplying information about the neighborhood and its history and for her generosity in sharing VECA memorabilia with the research team.

The success of a project of this nature is dependent upon the cooperation and help of many people. MIFA would like to thank the following for their assistance: Lois Hodge and Steve Canada of the Mid-South Title Company; John Harkins of the Memphis-Shelby County Archives; Vera Bradley; the staff of the History Department and the Memphis Room, Memphis and Shelby County Public Library and Information Center; Ann Moore; Michael P. Kirby; Richard K. Thomas; Vida Andersen; Madelyn Conrad; Carol Lowe; Bill Phelan of Frontier Press; Diana Crump; Maxine Halliburton; Kay Benton; Gene Bryan; Larry Wade; Patrolman R. G. Colburn; and the staffs of the following City of Memphis and Shelby County offices:
Board of Education, Department of Public Works, Tax Assessor's Office, Recorder's Office, Police Department,
Office of Planning and Development, and the Park Commission.
A special thanks goes to the clergymen and secretaries of the neighborhood churches and synagogue and to Goodbar Morgan and Helen Adamo of Southwestern; their willingness to share information, histories and pictures was greatly appreciated.

We are grateful to Arthur B. "Tim" Malkin, who loaned us his camera, and to the following who shared their pictures and maps with us for use in this publication; Mrs. Ethel Terry Barham; Mrs. Ceylon Blackwell, Sr.; Augustine
Cianciolo; Miss Alice Crump; Evergreen Presbyterian Church;
Faith Temple; McLean Baptist Church; Mid-South Title Company; Office of Housing and Community Development; Office of Planning and Development; Herman Plemons, editor of The Conveyor, a Sears publication; Snowden School; Southwestern at Memphis; Springdale United Methodist Church; and the VECA members.

Without the help of the residents of the VECA neighborhood, past and present, the writing of this history would not have been possible. To those who took time to share their recollections of the past, impressions of the present, and hopes for the future this acknowledgement is an inadequate but sincere expression of our appreciation.

We are greatly indebted to Lavelle Willis for her untiring efforts and competent ability to type this manuscript.
Our thanks to Bette Tilly and Pat Faudree, who were simultaneously writing a history of the Mid-Memphis neighborhood, for their cooperation and help. To the other members of the MIFA staff who helped with this project we say;
"Thanks."

work to the Evergreen News. In the words of cartoonist Draper Hill, "Increasingly these days one finds oneself under surveillance by Brad McMillan's engaging blobs of humanity." He observes and depicts our society with thoughtfulness and humor. We greatly appreciate the donation of his time and talents to this history.

Introduction

In the 1890s, what is now considered the VECA* neighborhood consisted mainly of dairy farms with two small communities, Terrytown and Springdale. The Terrytown community had been established by the Terry family, and Springdale was a stop on the L & N Railroad between Memphis and Nashville. It was here in these two communities that the original commercial area, the first school, and the oldest churches began.

People camped in the area during the Yellow Fever epidemics, because fresh spring water was available. Pioneer settlers were also attracted to the location by the good water found in Cypress and Lick Creeks and the numerous springs and wells nearby.

By 1907 a few families had built homes along North Parkway, known in the early 1900s as Summer or the Speedway. The initial reasons for the neighborhood’s expansion were the attitude of the Snowden/Overtown family in selling land to developers and the public policies which planned and built Snowden School, Overtown Park and the Parkway.

In the 1920s large scale subdivision development began in response to the Crosstown expansion and the anticipation of Southwestern's move to Memphis in 1925. This growth continued to the end of the 1920s, slowed during the depression, and reactivated in the late 1930s, continuing through the 1940s.

Joining the early residents, who had come from Mississippi, were Memphians from the older neighborhoods, a large Jewish

*Originally called VECAA, i.e. Vollintine/Evergreen Community Action Association. On March 26, 1979 the word, action, was removed from the name and the initials shortened to VECA. This history will use the current spelling throughout.

Over the years Vollintine has had several spellings in the old records. Today there is still a difference in the spelling of the school and the street. Consequently, this history will use Vollentine for the school. Elsewhere Vollintine will be used.
contingency and many people of foreign extraction. Today increasing numbers of black families have moved into the neighborhood which has integrated more successfully than any other Memphis neighborhood. While the community has not experienced large scale white flight, certain areas have made a racial change, and there are some polarizing issues. However, there remains much loyalty among the white population to the neighborhood. Many residents have lived in their same home over fifty years; second and even third generations remain in the neighborhood.

Public policy has been an active participant in the neighborhood's growth and will be a major factor in its future. Several of the issues, I-40, West Drive, and the traffic situation, are city-wide in scope. How they are resolved holds significance for the neighborhood. Much also depends on a genuine biracial solution to the neighborhood's problems; there have been good beginnings, but both communities have further work to do.

The purpose of this history is to examine the elements which comprised the growth of the Vollentine/Evergreen community and those which affect its future.
