Located approximately two and one-half miles slightly northeast of downtown Memphis, Shelby County, in western Tennessee, the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District is comprised of 3218 primary and secondary resources. The building stock consists of one, one and one-half, and two story residential buildings; garages; multi-family apartment buildings; churches; and one-part commercial blocks. Also inventoried as contributing structures are eleven 1930s WPA projects in this area - the Lick Creek channelization and ten bridge overpass railings. Another important class of contributing resources are ten well houses located within the boundaries that are associated with the Mallory Pumping Station on North Parkway. The majority of the largely intact and homogenous residential building stock are excellent examples of bungalows, Tudor English and Colonial Revival styles, and Minimal Traditional forms. Mostly constructed between 1922 and 1928, the 1983 primary buildings are mainly in good to fair condition. Most of the 1214 secondary buildings are contributing. Only eighty-one primary buildings are noncontributing, due to being less than fifty years old or because of abusive alterations.

Containing sixty-seven blocks, the boundaries of the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District are Watkins Street on the west, Vollintine Avenue on the north, the rear property lines of Hallwood Drive and University Circle and University Avenue north to Jackson Avenue on the east, and the CSX (LaN) railroad tracks from Watkins Street to the rear property lines of the three houses on Somerset between the former railroad tracks and North Parkway, then extending across Stonewall Street and behind the rear property lines of Faxon Avenue between Stonewall Street and McLean Boulevard, then extending north behind Snowden School and extending east to University Street on the south.

The historical development of the district is evident in the scattering of modest circa 1905 wood frame composite and pyramidal hip roof cottages found on Jackson and Crump avenues between Evergreen Street and McLean Boulevard; the brick veneer bungalows that line the north-south streets between Watkins Street and McLean Boulevard; the large stucco and brick eclectic style residences on Jackson Avenue; and the stone, wood and stucco Tudor English Revival houses found on Hallwood Drive and Oakwood Place. Statistics show that sixty-three percent of the buildings were erected circa 1922 to 1928 and twenty-six percent were erected from 1929 to 1939.

The district’s street pattern reflects changes in the street grid patterns during the twenty-five years when the majority of the district developed. The eastern section of the Speedway Terrace Subdivision, located in the southwest quadrant bounded by Jackson Avenue on the north, the CSX (L&W) railroad on the south, Watkins Street on the west and Stonewall Street on the east is composed of east-west bilateral grids with alleys. Most of the rest of the district’s internal streets are arranged in a north-south bilateral grid pattern. In the circa 1927 Hall-Wood Crest Subdivision, bounded by University Street on the west, Vollintine Avenue on the north, Jackson Avenue on the south, and the rear property lines of Hallwood Drive and University Circle on the east, the developers abandoned the district’s grid plan and laid out wide, curving streets. Also, the Springdale Subdivision (circa 1930) developed with longer lots and a cul-de-sac around Crump Avenue.

There is a marked horizontal character to the topography of the district south of Jackson Avenue. A gradual rise is detectable north of Jackson Avenue to Vollintine Street. The streets cut directly through the gently rolling landscape, resulting in terracing of varying heights on many lots north of Jackson Avenue. All residential streets in the district have cast concrete curbs, sidewalks, and driveways. The predominant lot size is fifty by one hundred and ten feet. Through continual maintenance of its houses and grassy landscaped lots, the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District has retained its historical and architectural integrity.

The landscaping of the district gives the area a cohesive, lush character with medium size lots, uniform twenty foot set-backs, mature deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs, flower beds, and well-maintained lawns. Jackson Avenue, Tutwiler Avenue, and University Street exhibit landscaped, grassy medians.

The stonework and concrete lined sloping wall culvert of channelized Lick Creek, that winds through the district south of Jackson Avenue from Idlewild Street to Watkins Avenue, was constructed in the 1930s as a WPA project. In conjunction with the creek channelization, ten bridge overpass railings were constructed. These are located on Tutwiler Avenue, Hawthorne Street, Auburndale Street, Evergreen Street, Belevedere Street, Dickinson Street, Avalon Street, Maury Street, Willett Street, and Stonewall Street. Also located in the district are ten rectangular plan, masonry construction well houses associated with the Mallory Pumping Station. The well houses are located parallel to the former L&N Railroad line on Watkins Street at North Parkway, east of Stonewall Street on North Parkway, Tutwiler Avenue and Willett Street, Tutwiler Avenue and Avalon Street, Tutwiler Avenue at Dickinson Street, Belvedere Street and Evergreen Street, Auburndale Street and Evergreen Street, Auburndale Street and Hawthorne Street, Hawthorne Street and Idlewild Street, and McLean Boulevard and Idlewild Street.

An inventory of all resources in the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District was prepared by Mary Wilder, Dottie Sachritz, Linda Nichols and volunteer neighborhood residents of the Vollintine Evergreen Community Association. The survey data was field-checked by Judith Ann Johnson, Preservation Consultant. Mapping was done by Mark Harrison.
The photographs and slides of were taken by Judith Wimmer.

Glossary of Survey Terms used in the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District Inventory

A glossary describing the characteristics of architectural styles, forms, and their individual details used in the inventory are included as a part of this nomination. Many of these vernacular styles and types are used together. For example, a house may be a Craftsman Airplane Bungalow, Minimal Traditional Cottage, Cape Colonial Revival, or Craftsman Pyramidal Cottage. Also, the term Vernacular is used when a building has no discernable individual style, but takes features from a number of styles or forms.

Cottage
This one or one and one-half story house is marked by a complex roof line. An L-shaped hipped roof porch is common, with both front and side entrances. This house form often has Queen Anne or Colonial Revival styles or influences. Only a few of these houses are found in the district. See inventory #580 and #582. However, the term cottage is used often to describe a building of one or one and one-half stories that has various stylistic details.

Vernacular Cottage
In the district inventory, this term is used to describe a house that is one or one and one-half stories and has no recognizable plan. These houses have a mixture of various architectural features. See inventory #463.
Craftsman Bungalow
The bungalow is small in size and is a single story or one and one-half stories. The roof can be front gabled or side gabled. Most common in the district is the front gabled bungalow. The identifying features of the Craftsman style include a low pitched gable roof with wide, unenclosed eave overhangs. Roof rafters are usually exposed and there are decorative beams or braces commonly added under gables. Porches, either full or partial width, have roofs supported by tapered square columns, which often extend to ground level. Some examples display half-timbering or jerkinhead roofs. See inventory #1066.

An interesting variation of the bungalow is found in the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District. This bungalow is side gabled with a low pitched roof which extends past the front of the house to form the roof of the porch. It is often supported by turned or boxed wooden columns, brick piers, or wrought iron. See inventory #532.

Airplane Bungalow
This is another variation of the bungalow. It contains a raised portion of the central roof and, generally, has low windows along the side(s) of the raised portion. See inventory #1072.

Spanish Bungalow or Spanish Eclectic
Another sub-type of the bungalow, this type has gables that may be triangular or curved. The gables often project off the front of the main body. Arcades or arches are used to organize the face of the structure. The house massing is rectangular in shape, and usually sheathed with stucco. Other identifying features are a low pitched roof with little or no overhang, red tile roof, and an asymmetrical facade. See inventory #1706.

Tudor English Cottage
The Tudor English Cottage is found in the district in a variation of the bungalow. It features asymmetrical massing of steeply pitched roofs, walls with clean edges, unusual window patterns, tall front chimneys, and English detailing. There is frequent use of Tudor framing and half-timbering, with high contrast coloring. The roof contains cross gables, which are an important element of this style. The entry is generally an uncovered stoop, although it may contain an entry hood. Porches are usually on the side and do not cover the entry. See inventory #168.
Tudor English House
Some two story English houses are found on larger corner lots in the district. This style is similar to the Tudor English Cottage, except for its size. See inventory #165.

Cape Cod or Cape Cod Colonial Revival
This unique vernacular type was developed in early Colonial New England nearly three hundred years ago. It gained renewed national popularity in the late 1920s with the rise in popularity of the Colonial Revival style and, with the advent of the Great Depression, its initial small size and low cost made it very popular in developing suburban areas. It is one and one-half stories with a side gabled roof and central front entrance, often pedimented. Single window units are symmetrically arranged and usually contain six light sashes. Dormers were often built to expand and light the upper level. See inventory #1308.

Pyramidal Cottage
This cottage is symmetrical in plan and massing and has frame construction, a hipped roof, and, sometimes, a separate hipped porch. The most noticeable detail is the pyramidal roof. These are one or one and one-half stories in height. See inventory #576.

Colonial Revival
The Colonial Revival house has two stories with a three bay organization. The roof is side gabled or hipped, and the roof line is parallel to the street. The chimneys are located on the end walls. Identifying features include an accentuated front door, normally with an engaged pediment supported by pilasters, a symmetrical facade, and windows with double-hung sashes (usually multi-light). See inventory #1366.

Dutch Colonial Revival
This is a two story gambrel roof house with a side gable roof line running parallel to the street. Each face of the roof line contains at least two separate pitches, excluding dormers. In later versions seen in the district, the dormers are shed roofed and extend across the entire facade. The siding is generally weatherboard, but some versions have combinations of brick and stone. Chimneys are located at the end walls. See inventory #709.
Foursquare
The Foursquare is a two story house characterized by its cubic, roughly square, massing. The facade usually has four bays - a door and three window openings. The roof is pyramidal or hipped, with hipped roof dormers on one or more sides. Exterior walls can be brick, stone or cast stone veneer, or weatherboard. The porch is on the facade and sometimes extends to one of the elevations. It has a separate hip or half-hip roof. See inventory #1737.

Gable Front and Wing House
For this type of house, a single gable faces the street and there is a gabled wing parallel to the street. It is usually two stories in height. See inventory #141.

Minimal Traditional
The Minimal Traditional influence is the primary stylistic detailing of residential architecture following the Craftsman and Colonial Revival periods. The style was popular in the Memphis area from circa 1930 to circa 1970. These spare houses retain the form of traditional revival houses but lack their decoration. Often there is a large chimney and one front-facing gable. Roof pitches are low, eaves and rake are close, and windows have little or no reveal. Brick veneered exterior surfaces are a common treatment. Any embellishments on this style are usually found at entrances. See inventory #760.

INVENTORY
Listed below by inventory number and street address are the principal resources in the district. Contributing (C) resources are significant to the historical, cultural, and contextual development and evolution of the district through time. They represent elements of compatible design, scale, use and texture of the district that define the very cornerstones of its cultural and physical identity. Noncontributing (NC) resources have little or no compatibility with the district in age or design; or they have been so altered as to have lost architectural integrity as individual elements.

Inventory Notes
The inventory is given in alphanumerical order except that structures inventoried (Lick Creek channelization, bridges, and pumping stations) are at the end of the street inventory. They are numbers 1984-2004.

Several properties have inventory numbers that are out of numerical order, although the street address is in numerical order. These properties are noted by an asterisk.

The Vollintine Evergreen Historic District is being nominated under Criterion C for its significance as a cohesive and largely intact collection of twentieth century speculatively developed residential architecture in Memphis. Resources in the district span the historic development of this neighborhood from circa 1900 to 1946 and represent one of the most significant concentrations of early twentieth century residential style housing stock in the City.

A medium density early twentieth century residential area, the district substantially retains the architectural and landscape design which have attracted residents since its inception. Although the Hein Park (NR 11/16/88), East Buntyn (NR pending) and Glenview (proposed) historic districts were also developed at the same time, the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District contains the largest cohesive collection of eclectic style houses in Memphis. This large area developed as a number of subdivisions that contain a variety of popular architectural styles including bungalows, Colonial and Dutch Colonial Revival styles, Tudor English Cottages and Houses, Foursquares, Cape Cod houses, and Minimal Traditional types. The low number of noncontributing resources, historic outbuildings, and residential setting give the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District a high degree of integrity.

The origins of the district can be traced back to John Rice of Nashville, who purchased 5,000 acres of a North Carolina land grant on the Chickasaw Bluff in 1789. After Rice’s untimely demise, the land grant was purchased by Judge John Overton, another Nashville businessman, who became a proprietor of the new town of Memphis.

The district’s first real development was the construction of the Memphis and Ohio (Louisville and Nashville) Railroad. The line was chartered in 1852 and completed to the Tennessee-Kentucky state line by 1860. Although the railroad tracks ran northeasterly through this part of town from the depot on Front Street, the Vollintine Evergreen area remained sparsely settled in the nineteenth century.

However, as the twentieth century began, the heirs of John Overton began to dispose of their large land holdings, including the land south of Vollintine Avenue, Lots 2 and 4 of the Rice grant, an area of approximately 1,068 acres which ran from Watkins Street to Trezavant Street and from Vollintine Avenue to Autumn Street.
At the turn of the century, Memphis was lacking in many of the urban amenities of a large metropolitan area. In 1899, noted landscape designer William Olmstead was consulted about planning a park system for the City. Olmstead recommended that the city develop two large parks, one on the Mississippi River and the other at the eastern extremity. He further recommended that a system of parkways be constructed to connect the two parks.

Plans for the Memphis Parkway System (NR 7/3/89) were begun in 1901 by noted planner and landscape engineer George Kessler with assistance from John C. Olmstead. Although a substantial amount of right of way was donated, some owners opposed having their land used for the new road system. Consequently, the Park Commission was forced to condemn some of the property and, as time went by, the land became increasingly difficult and expensive to buy because of speculative developmental pressures. Land prices quadrupled in value from 1903 to 1910 along the horseshoe shaped route encircling the urbanized sections of Memphis, although this undertaking was not completed for some twenty years.

By 1901, the City’s purchase of Lea’s Woods as the site for present day Overton Park (NR 10/25/79), combined with the construction of the Speedway, a mile-long equestrian tract on present day North Parkway between Stonewall Street and University Avenue, was the impetus for a housing boom in the area. By 1903, Robert Galloway’s Evergreen subdivision (Evergreen Historic District, NR 1/11/85) was opened for residential development.

The present day Vollintine Evergreen Historic District had its beginnings when plats for three subdivisions were filed. The success of the original Evergreen Subdivision, the beginning of the parkway system and the availability of land north of the Speedway led to the filing of these plats.

The first filing was in 1904 for the twenty acre Faxon’s Addition to Evergreen by Finley Faxon, a prominent real estate developer. He was early in a career that would span fifty years as the City’s leading developer and builder. The new subdivision was located on both sides of Faxon Avenue and the north side of North Parkway between McLean Boulevard and Evergreen Street. The twenty acre J.M. Dickinson’s Addition to the Evergreen Subdivision (1905) included both sides of Faxon Avenue and the north side of North Parkway between Evergreen Street and Avalon Street. (The North Parkway portion of both of these
In 1905, the Crump and Guthrie North Evergreen Subdivision was filed. It was bounded by Evergreen Street on the west, McLean Boulevard on the east, Jackson Avenue on the north and, on the south, it was bordered by Mignon Street. Although these plats were filed between 1903 and 1905, few houses were constructed during this period.

Some modest growth occurred when two more subdivision were platted in the teens. These were the 1910 Speedway Terrace Subdivision including Snowden Street, North Parkway, Watkins Street, and Stonewall Street; and the University Park Subdivision of 1912, including Jackson Avenue, Tutwiler Street, Stonewall Street, and McLean Boulevard south of the railroad.

As the second and third generation-American residents of the Greenlaw neighborhood (Greenlaw Historic District NR 7/11/84) and of the Pinch area (Pinch North Main Historic District NR 2/27/79) began migrating eastward, the 1920s was a decade that witnessed a great surge of urban growth and change in the Vollintine Evergreen neighborhood.

Catholic Italian-Americans settled in the Vollintine Evergreen neighborhood in an area roughly bounded by Evergreen Street on the east, Vollintine Avenue on the north, Watkins Street on the west, and Jackson Avenue on the south. So many parishioners from the Holy Names Catholic Church in Greenlaw moved to Vollintine Evergreen that a new parish was formed and placed under the patronage of St. Teresa. Constructed in 1930, the combination church and school building of the St. Teresa Church of the Little Flower, at 1666 Jackson Avenue, is an excellent example of a Spanish Revival Style building. (The extant historic building is now used as a school and modern church constructed nearby.) Vollintine Evergreen businesses such as Bosi’s Grocery, Dino’s Grill, and Evangalesti’s Pharmacy bore the Italian surnames of their owners.

Many Protestants settled in the area bounded by Jackson Avenue on the north, Tutwiler Street on the south, Watkins Street on the west, and University Avenue on the east. Due to building demolitions and congregation reorganizations, the only historic Protestant church located in the district is the 1927 Gothic Revival style St. John Redeemer Church at 1663 Tutwiler.

Orthodox Jews had settled in Memphis by 1862. They were not chartered until 1892 when they founded the Baron Hirsch Synagogue downtown at Fourth and Washington streets. Slowly, the congregation began migrating from the Pinch neighborhood. They settled in the part of Vollintine Evergreen bounded by Evergreen Street on the west, University Avenue on the east, Jackson Avenue on the south, and Vollintine Avenue on the north. Some of this area was developed by Jewish builders Harry and Ben Dlugach, who also built houses for themselves in the area.

Devastating epidemics of dysentery, cholera, and typhoid fever regularly occurred in Memphis until 1885 when artesian water was first discovered here. Even after the establishment of the Memphis Artesian Water Company and construction of the Waring Plant Sewage lines, breaks in the sewage system pipes allowed recurring typhoid fever epidemics to continue until at least 1919. The City realized that a new water pumping station was necessary. The Parkway (Mallory) Pumping Station was constructed in 1922. Each of the twenty-three wells of the system was covered with a brick house that functioned as the base for the water pump. The artesian water in the wells is pumped from the five hundred foot level. Ten of the well houses are located in the district.

The abundance of Tudor English Revival cottages and houses in the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District may be at least partially attributed to the construction of Southwestern at Memphis (NR 11/28/77, now Rhodes College). The original award-winning buildings, constructed in 1925 on the North Parkway campus, represent a fine and cohesive grouping of Collegiate Gothic architecture. The development of the school resulted in more residences constructed in its vicinity, during the era when Tudor and English styles were becoming fashionable.

The introduction of the popularly priced auto entered the scene and had a profound impact on the City's urban land form. It was also the decade of new streets and boulevards, the suburbanization of retail stores, land speculation, and attractive suburban subdivisions. In 1924 alone, some 2,400 housing units were built in Memphis, many of them concentrated in Vollintine Evergreen.

The large concentration of the bungalow, Craftsman, and revival styles found in Vollintine Evergreen attests to the rapid development that occurred between 1922 and 1928 when fourteen more subdivisions were added. These include the 1922 Malkin's Addition to Speedway Terrace, including lots on both sides of Lyndale Street from Watkins Street to Stonewall Street; and the 1923 Hall's Faxon Avenue Addition to Speedway Terrace, including Watkins Street on the west, extending from Faxon Street to Avalon Street. In 1924 development included the Falls' Avalon Terrace Subdivision, which encompassed both sides of Avalon Street between Vollintine Avenue and Jackson Avenue; the Burchart's Burchart-Pasadena Subdivision, including the southwest corner of Trezevant Street and Jackson Avenue; and the 1924 Edward LeMaster's Subdivision, on Jackson Avenue from McLean Boulevard to the L&N Railroad.

The 1925 subdivisions in the area are the University View Subdivision, including Tutwiler Street, the L&N Railroad, University Street, and McLean Boulevard; H. M. Hall's Jackson Heights Subdivision, including Vollintine Avenue, Jackson Avenue, Willett Street, and Maury Street; J. W. Falls' Belvedere Heights Subdivision, encompassing both sides of Dickinson Street and Belvedere Street and the west side of Evergreen Street between Vollintine Avenue and Jackson Avenue.

Subdivision development that occurred in 1926 includes Foster and Stevenson's Colonial Garden Subdivision, on Vollintine Avenue, Jackson Avenue, McLean Boulevard, and University Avenue; Ben P. Dlugach's Stonewall Subdivision, including Vollintine Avenue, Jackson Avenue, Garland Street and Stonewall Street. Later subdivisions are the 1927 H. Dlugach's Terry's Colonial Place, on Evergreen Street, McLean Boulevard, Jackson Avenue and Vollintine Avenue; the 1927 H. M. Hall's Hall-Wood Crest Subdivision, including Vollintine Avenue, Springdale Street, L&N Railroad, and University Avenue; and the 1928 H. Dlugach's University Circle, including an area east of the intersection of Jackson Avenue and University Street.

The residential development of Vollintine Evergreen came to a halt in 1929 when the stock market crashed. Many of the developers who plunged into subdivision planning in the 1920s had to retrench during the 1930s when Memphis, like the nation, was deep into a depression. However, a federal relief program known as the WPA did aid in public improvements made in the Vollintine Evergreen district such as reinforced stonework in Lick Creek and the concrete bridge railings on the Lick Creek bridge overpasses which remain as contributing structures today.

During the Depression home building by the private sector was nearly discontinued. However, the federal government initiated several building programs which probably benefitted the Vollintine Evergreen district. No federal program was more important to home building than the creation of the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) in 1934. As the effects of the Depression eased in the late 1930s and the population of the area continued to increase, improvements were made in streets and public transportation serving the neighborhood. Before World War II began in the early 1940s, the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District was essentially developed. The last historic subdivision platted in the district was also a first for the area because it was developed by a woman. Julia Ulhorn's 1938 Mignon Terrace Subdivision is bounded by the L&N Railroad, an alley north of Mignon Street, McLean Boulevard, and an alley west of Hawthorne Street.

There have long been speculatively built, two-story apartment units in Vollintine Evergreen interspersed among the single family residences. The first apartment units appeared in the 1920s. Between 1926 and 1928 four apartment buildings were constructed in the 1400 block of Jackson Avenue. Among other apartment buildings built at the same time were four in the 600 block of University Street and five in the 800 block of Maury Street. In some instances, the owner occupied one unit and rented the others.

Historic commercial areas all date to circa 1925 and include one-part commercial blocks on the northwest and southwest corners of Jackson Avenue and Evergreen Street; Jackson Avenue east of Lyndale Street and McLean Boulevard from Faxon Avenue to east of Tutwiler Avenue.

The Vollintine Evergreen Historic District stands as a significant element of the residential environment of Memphis, Tennessee. The district maintains integrity and significance as a district eligible for listing under Criteria C in the area of architecture for its characteristics of design, materials, workmanship, size and setting of speculative housing located here.

GEOGRAPHICAL DATA

Verbal Boundary Description

Bounded by Watkins Street on the west, Vollintine Avenue on the north, the rear property lines of Hallwood Drive and University Circle and University Avenue north to Jackson Avenue on the east, and the former L & N railroad tracks from Watkins to the rear property lines of the three houses on Somerset Avenue between the former railroad tracks and North Parkway, then extending across Stonewall Street and behind the rear property lines of Faxon Avenue between Stonewall Street and McLean Boulevard, then extending north behind Snowden School and extending east to University Street on the south, as outlined in the bold black dashed on the enclosed Shelby County property tax maps. Although the maps show lines drawn to the center of the streets, the district boundaries extend only to the property lines of parcels in the district.

Boundary Justification

The boundary of the Vollintine Evergreen Historic District includes only those properties historically related to the development of the district.
