The initial results of the VECA survey on the Evergreen-Jackson commercial area are in! VECA heard back from 140 respondents, a vast majority (96%) being residents. In addition, 6% respondents were property or business owners in the neighborhood, 4% were employed by, attend or represent a neighborhood institution or organization, and 6% were “other.” These results are “initial” because VECA is still asking other residents to complete the survey – including those not online and those who patronize businesses in the commercial area.

We want to thank everyone who took the time to fill out the survey. The results to date are summarized below.

Meanwhile, please mark your calendar to attend the next VECA event to move this initiative forward, the Evergreen-Jackson Walking Tour and Community Conversation on Saturday, April 1, from 1:00 to 3:30 p.m. This event will be an opportunity for everyone who cares about improving the commercial area to get an up-close look and to share and discuss ideas on improvements with VECA neighbors and Andy Kitsinger, our planning consultant and architect.

Image and Attractiveness of Evergreen-Jackson Commercial Area: All survey respondents said that the Evergreen-Jackson commercial area was either “very important” (85%) or “important” (15%) to the image of the neighborhood. With regard to the “attractiveness of the area,” a majority of respondents saw the commercial district as either “not attractive at all” (67%) or as “okay, but it could be better” (32%).

There was a striking consensus on what should be done to improve the attractiveness of the area: 99% wanted to see new, attractive uses, followed by 90% who said that façade improvements were needed. These were followed by 83% of respondents who wanted more landscaping, 81% who wanted repairs to public sidewalks and curbs, 65% who wanted painted crosswalks, and 60% who saw a need for more frequent litter pickup.

Safety of the Evergreen-Jackson Commercial Area: On the surface, the safety of the area did not seem to evoke as strong a consensus from respondents as did physical attractiveness: 50% said it is “okay, but could be better,” while 39% said the area is not safe or doesn’t feel safe. However, the fact that only 9% of respondents felt that the area is “reasonably safe” is perhaps the most revealing on this topic.

Responses on ways to improve the safety or perceived safety of the area, in order from highest to lowest, were change in uses of some properties, especially those vacant or underutilized (30%); design changes to make it feel safer/make it harder to commit
VECA Annual Meeting Recap, January 29, 2017

The VECA board held its annual meeting at the VECA Welcome Center this year. Customarily, we meet at a neighborhood church and we’re very grateful for their hospitality. However, we wanted to get neighbors into the Center so they could see the potential of the space as a place for community activities.

The plan worked. The building was filled, yet comfortable enough for people to get their breakfast and visit with each other. Thank you, Living Hope Church, for lending us the cushion chairs; thank you, neighbors, for bringing plenty of food for everyone to enjoy; and thank you all for attending. A special thanks to Lifeblood for being on site to receive donations—saving lifes, one pint at a time!

The meeting started off on the right note with speaker Cindy McMillion of the Connecting Memphis project. She tells the story of Memphis through people. She kept everyone engaged by telling about the Memphians she has interviewed for her website in the last 2 1/2 years.

Andy Kitsinger then introduced the Strengthening Communities Initiative project. He will be leading the VECA effort to re-envision the Evergreen/Jackson intersection. A survey about the intersection was conducted with those in attendance. There will be a lot of activity this year related to this project, so look for announcements about upcoming workshops.

Chuck Fox gave the financial report. Justin Burkhead gave the committee report, and Chris Floyd facilitated the VECA board and president election. Lilly Gilkey, who has been VECA president for the last three years, ended her term in accordance with the VECA bylaws. The nomination for president was VECA resident and board member Bob Rigus. The VECA membership enthusiastically voted for him. We look forward to working with Bob this year.

The 2017 VECA board members are: Justin Burkhead; Michalyn Easter; Karen Edwards, Secretary; Chris Floyd; Chuck Fox, Treasurer; Mary Gibson; Lilly Gilkey; Marci Hendrix; Jackie Jones; Ryan Knop; Angela Lamb; Stacy Pennington; Sam Powers; Jeff Riddle; Bob Rigus, President; Tony Steinberg; Natasha Strong, Vice President; Jeannie Tomlinson

Service awards were presented to people and institutions who help make Vollintine Evergreen a better neighborhood.

The Richard S. Borys Award is given to public officials who, through their work, contribute to the Vollintine Evergreen community. The award was presented to Memphis City Beautiful. MCB has been instrumental in helping make the neighborhood cleaner through the years by grants and cleanups. Cyndy Grivich Tucker and Eldra White accepted the award on MCB’s behalf.

The Margaret Dichtel Award goes to a Vollintine Evergreen resident who embodies the principles of community service and action. Two such awards were given this year. Raymond Wells received the Dichtel award for his volunteer work on the Lyndale Community Garden. He helps at all of the garden clean-up days, but he’s seen many other days doing tasks such as working on the mulch pile, picking vegetables, cleaning up the site and, most important, carrying heavy items. During the heat of summer, vegetables must be picked almost daily in order for the plants to keep bearing, and he has undertaken that task.

Jo Ann Street received the Dichtel award for working with children and adults in the northeast section of the neighborhood. She is the founder of a litter patrol brigade named HUG. HUG is an acronym of the three parks in the area: Hollywood Park, University Park and Gooch Park. Jo Ann has coordinated bike safety classes for children, and she initiated the Adopt a Park program through Memphis City Beautiful.

The Michael Kirby award honors a VECA volunteer who has rendered exceptional service to the Vollintine Evergreen Community Association. Two awards were given this year. Natasha Strong received the Kirby award for her leadership of the VECA Membership Committee, which had a fundraising record high in 2016. A passionate board member, she has been involved in the mural project, the green triangle projects, and the historic street sign project through the VECA Historic Committee. Cathy Marcinko received the Kirby award for her outstanding work on the VECA Historic Committee. She and Natasha make a great team co-leading the committee, and their efforts are commendable. Cathy has helped VECA with numerous grants, and she is always willing to share her vast knowledge and expertise of urban planning with VECA.

Lilly Gilkey received a Presidential Appreciation Award for serving VECA well in her three terms as president. We have been inspired by her care and compassion, and we have seen her be a patient and open-minded leader who always managed to lead gracefully and with a sense of humor.

Neighborhood Watch

The National Neighborhood Watch program is one of the oldest and most well-known crime prevention concepts in history that stresses community awareness and teamwork. Neighborhood Watch in Memphis was officially formulated in 1984. It is an organization which empowers local citizens to take back and maintain a better quality of life in their respective neighborhoods. This program has shown that citizens help in the reduction of local crime by being vigilant and by partnering with local law enforcement to address the crime related issues and economical challenges within their community. (www.memphispolice.org/initiatives.asp)

VECA is an official member of the Neighborhood Watch program. Meetings are held at Crump Station Monthly the first Tuesday of each month at 6:00pm. You can share your concerns and ideas to help make our neighborhoods safer.

VECA holds quarterly NW meetings as well at the VECA Welcome Center.

Remaining 2017 NW Meetings at the VECA Welcome Centre
- Tuesday, June 20, 2017, 6-7pm
- Tuesday, September 19, 2017, 6-7pm

People also use the site to talk about more personal things, like lost pets. Crime and prevention is a frequent topic and Nextdoor is increasingly becoming like a virtual neighborhood watch for the neighborhood. Technology is helping people become more connected, and you are invited to join the conversation.
VECA Blight Busters Take Action

City of Memphis Code Enforcement Takes No Action

By the Blight Busters Committee

On a beautiful Saturday morning on March 4, volunteers gathered to clean up a long-time vacant property at 1402 Snowden. The property was inundated with trash and debris. The front door was open to trespassers and illegal activity. This property is a diamond in the rough with good bones and is only three blocks from the Crosstown Concourse.

Numerous complaints have been made to the City of Memphis’s Code Enforcement division regarding this nuisance as well as many other vacant, blighted properties throughout the neighborhood. Code Enforcement’s response has been ineffective, and the division does not hold owners of blighted properties accountable. We need the City of Memphis and Code Enforcement to respond to our neighborhood concerns and save our beautiful historic homes.

Volunteers with VECA Blight Busters decided to take matters into their own hands. Volunteers cleaned up all the clothing, trash and debris that littered the property and boarded the front door securely. Two Memphis police officers also assisted in the effort by ensuring that vagrants were not in the house before the front door was boarded. VECA appreciates the brave men and women who patrol our neighborhood and keep us safe.

Way to go, Blight Busters, for cleaning up neglected properties in our neighborhood! You can join the effort against blight in Vollintine Evergreen by attending Blight Busters committee meetings and clean-up events. Check the VECA calendar or Nextdoor, com, or call the office for volunteer opportunities.

Memphis City Beautiful Coordinates Cleanup

By Mike Kirby

Memphis City Beautiful Commission partnered with VECA on Martin Luther King Jr. Day of Service to sponsor Dumpster Day at a blighted property at 1445 Lyndale Avenue.

The property had an overwhelming amount of debris, and the owners were unwilling to clean up the property. VECA had filed complaints with the Code Enforcement and most recently complained to the mayor when he came to VECA last November.

City Beautiful, through leader Cyndy Grivich, provided a Dumpster, advertised for MLK Day volunteers and arranged for fifteen community service workers. They also provided a staff member the day of the event to help with intake.

The Dumpster got filled and the volunteers also trimmed and raked so the property was not so unsightly. However, it is still up to Code Enforcement to address the damage to the house itself. More than 30 volunteers turned up, despite the threat of rain. VECA volunteers from the neighborhood were joined by residents of the Lyndale block, along with a group of students from Rhodes College. The Dumpster was provided by Republic Services and tools were provided by the V&E Greenline. Solid Waste Management picked up a lot of debris that did not fit in the Dumpster, and we appreciate their efforts.

Special thanks are due to the neighbors on Lyndale, especially Wayne Stanfil, who brought this concern to VECA.

Memphis City Beautiful is a long-time supporter of VECA. Previously, they presented VECA with two grants: one for the Lyndale Community Garden and one for the Leaps and Bounds mural. They were also the primary sponsor for the planting of trees that have now grown to a large size on Jackson Avenue. After Hurricane Elvis, they donated over 20 large trees that were planted at homes on Jackson Avenue and on the V&E Greenline. They have been steadfast supporters of cleanups and have twice donated Dumpsters to VECA for cleanups.
V&E Greenline Partners with Serve901 and St. George’s

The V&E Greenline benefited from a service project conducted by the students from St. George’s Independent School under the auspices of Serve901, located at Living Hope Church.

Over 30 students and chaperones worked on projects that improved the condition of the V&E Greenline.

On the morning of February 22, the students raked leaves in the drainage ditch from Auburndale Street to Hawthorne Street. The leaves were a problem since they both impeded drainage and did not look so great.

In the afternoon, the students painted the Big Kids sculptures on the west end of the trail near Crosstown Concourse. Some damage to the sculptures was repaired and the painting made the sculptures look great. In addition, the students did maintenance work on the thirteen trees that were recently planted on the trail.

The St. George’s students were a hard-working, very friendly group and the chaperones did a great job.

St. George’s Independent School is a college preparatory school in the Episcopal tradition of education that is dedicated to the pursuit of excellence, preparing students for a life of learning and meaningful contribution in an inclusive learning community that nurtures outstanding academic achievement, relationships, leadership, and character reinforced by Judeo-Christian values.

Serve901 also curates service experiences with college students to understand and serve with Memphis.”

Special thanks to Timothy Gibson and Jeff Riddle for making this service project happen. 🍃

There’s a new mural on Jackson Avenue. Last October, with the help of volunteers, I completed my second public art project in our neighborhood. The new mural, inspired by the eclectic mix of architecture found throughout Vollintine Evergreen, depicts silhouettes of some landmarks in various shades of green.

Early last year VECA board member Natasha Strong called me with the opportunity to revitalize the wall at the Talk of the Town Salon, formerly Swag Barbershop. We worked closely together on securing funding for the mural through Memphis City Beautiful and developed a crowd funding campaign through ioby. Through multiple sources, including VECA, we raised $2,000.

Once most of the funding was awarded I started to gather materials, which included a 5-gallon bucket of primer to coat the 15’x40’ wall. In mid-October I worked with volunteers through organizations like Serve901, Rhodes College and the University of Memphis. Students from Creighton University, Ohaha, Nebraska, working with Serve901, volunteered to help us prime and paint sections of the wall. With everyone’s help I was able to get the mural completed in early November.

This mural was a neighborhood effort and showed how much can get accomplished with a little planning and paint. I am constantly thinking of ways to make where I live better, and I look forward to creating and supporting similar projects in the future.

VECA Garden Club

The VECA Garden Club, now six months old, met on February 10 with both members and those interested in gardening. The club meets monthly for presentations and community work sessions.

Its mission is to beautify the V&E neighborhood, one garden at a time, and to enhance our knowledge of gardening. It is a member of the Tennessee Federation of Garden Clubs. It will also be honoring VECA Yard of the Month winners.

The meeting offered a presentation by Carol Watkins, a master gardener, on preparing the spring garden. Among the suggestions she made was to remove leaves and dead plant growth, to mulch the garden to reduce weeds, and not to till the soil, since that activates weed seeds. Mulching also conserves water, cools plant roots, and feeds the soil.

Several online sources were suggested for following garden events and plant sales, including those of the Memphis Horticultural Society, the Botanic Garden, and the Dixon.

Severa online sources were suggested for following garden events and plant sales, including those of the Memphis Horticultural Society, the Botanic Garden, and the Dixon. See the calendar on veca.org for the club meeting dates. It is a great group, and it’s a lot of fun to attend the meeting and meet neighbors. Connie Shepherd, chair of the Garden Club, offered to answer questions about garden issues through email: bmech314@gmail.com 😊

Planning for the Future

By Jackie Waters

Saving money isn’t easy; if it were, we’d never have money troubles again. Yet it’s important to ensure that our futures are taken care of, especially if there are children involved (even more so if your child has special needs), because nothing is set in stone. Job security wanes, major expenses come up, and our needs change. That’s just a part of life.

Fortunately, there are several easy ways you can start saving money now for the years to come, whether you want to put aside some cash for a rainy day or start a college fund for your kids. The key is to think outside the box and get creative. Here are some of the best ways you can plan for your future.

Determine your goals: Planning for the future can be overwhelming, so it’s best to start small and go from there. First, sit down and think about what your goals are. Do you want to save for a car or to buy and move into your first home, or are your needs more long-term? Creating a nest egg for retirement is something we all have to think about, so narrow your focus and figure out a number. Having a financial goal will help you stay focused.

Set a budget: Like millions of Americans, you might already be on a tight budget, but that doesn’t mean you can’t find ways to save money. Remember: every little bit helps. Don’t be seduced by big numbers; it’s unlikely that you’ll be able to sock away a thousand bucks at a time, so focus instead on small savings that will add up. You can do this by using coupons at the supermarket and checking the weekly ads so you can combine savings, finding Groupon deals for things you already need or use, carpooling to save on gas and wear-and-tear on your car, and taking your lunch to work or school instead of eating out.

Get creative: If you are skilled at making things--furniture, jewelry, clothing, art—consider opening up an Etsy business or selling through your own site (there are plenty of tools to make creating one easy for the novice). The fees are minimal (about 20 cents per item you put in your shop) and you can expand your business quickly by promoting it on social media. Maybe you already have some supplies on hand.

Upgrade your home: Having your own place is expensive, whether you rent or own, so take small measures now to save money later. If you have windows or doors that don’t seal properly, keep warm or cool air from leaking out by using caulk, plastic insulation, or just a rolled-up towel along the bottom. Set your ceiling fans to turn the other way in wintertime so the warm air near the ceiling will be pushed down. Invest in a smart thermostat that can be set to keep a steady temperature all day. All these things can help lower your utility bills.

Get cooking: It’s so much easier to stop for fast food when you’ve had a long day, but eating out once or twice a week can really add up. Do your shopping for the week and then cook up a few meals to freeze for those nights when you just don’t feel like being in the kitchen. It will taste so much better when you know it’s saving you money. 😊
Neighbor Highlight - Ned Canty

By Marci Hendrix

I had the pleasure of meeting with Ned Canty, general director of the Memphis Opera, at Café Eclectic last week. We talked about opera and our neighborhood. He and his wife, Karen, moved to Vollintine Evergreen in January 2016 from Central Gardens. They needed a home with a large yard for their three rescue dogs, Stella, PJ and Shorty. They were thrilled to find the yard and the house – a 1927 Tudor – here in V&E. The home had recently been rehabbed and the contractors did a great job of opening up the space, and the new chef’s kitchen enhances their love of cooking.

They are delighted with the house, the yard and us. Canty is inspired by Memphians who walk the walk. He attended the VECA annual meeting and was fascinated by the Evergreen/Jackson business district project, and he’s looking forward to an opera performance at the old BP gas station site at that intersection.

Canty says, “I like to get skin in the game. My fortune needs to rise and fall with the city. I don’t want to test the waters – I like to jump in the deep end.” Now seems to be the perfect time: “These are exciting times for the city, from the rise of craft beer breweries, to Overton Square and Crosstown Concourse. There’s so much going on in the city and everything is only ten minutes away.” He notes that change can happen very quickly and carries the risk that a place can lose the essential qualities that makes it special. But Canty believes Memphis has a great chance of growing in a more organic way, which in the long term prevents the danger of losing its unique identity.

Canty is working to make opera more accessible, as he is convinced that opera improves the life of everyone in the city. “Art that works is where there’s no hard line between arts, artists and the audience.” An example of Canty’s dream of accessibility was his idea of a Memphis-specific original work. The work came to fruition in 2014 with a cycle of five short operas titled “Ghosts of Crosstown.” The work was performed that year on the loading dock at the Crosstown Concourse as part of the Midtown Opera Festival. The five operas were based on stories from employees of Sears and by nearby neighbors. Each opera had its own composer and all the librettos were written by Jerre Dye. The operas were based on stories from employees of Sears and by nearby neighbors. Each opera had its own composer and all the librettos were written by Jerre Dye. The stories ranged from romance to special purchases (such as a wedding ring) to the smells of popcorn and observations from the elevator staff. “There seem to be unifying connections to the Crosstown Concourse. It’s a metaphor of Memphis that anything is possible,” he says.

Canty encourages people to give opera a chance. He has a fun YouTube clip called “Opera Doesn’t Suck.” “We enjoy opera through movies, television, and cartoons, but the prospect of going to the opera seems different,” Canty observes. “Like TV and movies, opera is not a one-size-fit-all. One wouldn’t think of going to a movie or watching a TV show just once and writing it off for life. Opera needs to be seen at least four times before deciding yay or nay.” According to Canty, terrific operas are being written today about current issues and stories. “The art form is as broad as going to movies and TV – opera is for anyone with ears and a heart.”

Fun fact: Operatic music, like classical and choral music is heard regularly in commercials. My favorite right now is the Delta Faucet featuring the popular Habanera aria from Bizet’s Carmen. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0HUMr9WZ0BQ

The Memphis Opera season begins with the 30 Days of Opera and is bookended with the Midtown Opera Festival running now (March 31-April 9) at the Playhouse on the Square. http://www.operamemphis.org/MOF

Don’t be surprised if you see Ned Canty walking or riding his bike on the V&E Greenline, and don’t be afraid to stop him to chat about the arts in Memphis. His enthusiasm is contagious, and I’m looking forward to a future pop-up opera performance at the corner of Jackson and Evergreen. ☺
Letter from the Treasurer

Dear VECA,

We have reached financial stability. Back in 2008 the VECA Community Development Corporation closed its doors and the paid staff left. At that time VECA had five houses, two apartment buildings, and an office. VECA also had $41,236 in unsecured notes and $404,982 in bank loans for those houses, apartments, and office. Income from membership was less than $2,000 annually. VECA did not know if it could meet its monthly expenses. VECA understood the financial predicament and went to work. Owing to a great deal of sweat and over 1,000 volunteer hours, VECA volunteers fixed and rented the houses one at a time, with three houses in 2009 and all five by 2014. Volunteers fixed and rented the apartments one at a time, with three in 2009 and all seven by 2014. Then Rhodes College assisted with financial help through a grant for a renovation to the renamed Welcome Center in 2013. Members kept renewing and increasing membership contributions annually.

Today, we are financially stable. VECA has reduced the bank loans to $185,000. VECA also has an emergency reserve of more than $15,000. The housing market has improved and VECA is working with a local bank to sell houses again. The plan is to sell one house this year. The other part of the financial plan is to continue to pay down the principal on the loans. This would allow VECA to have all the loans paid off by 2022-2023.

There is still a dark cloud on the horizon: the cost for the Welcome Center. The Welcome Center costs $15,000 to operate and keep open. With contributions from Membership, there still remains a net $9,000 shortfall in the 2017 Welcome Center budget. This shortfall is now being funded from the rental apartments and houses, but that arrangement cannot continue if VECA is to remain sustainable. The Welcome Center is a very valuable resource for VECA. VECA is one of the few neighborhood associations that has its own building for offices, events, and meetings.

Membership income funds the various committees – Communications (newsletter), Historic (signage), blight abatement, events (annual meeting, National Night Out), Neighborhood Networks, and Neighborhood Watch meetings. For VECA to remain financially stable and strong, membership needs to increase and stay strong. All VECA residents, volunteers and Board members need to join as paying members to the fullest of their ability and to continue their good work!

Sincerely,
Chuck Fox, Treasurer

Pizza with Planners

VECA and ioby

By John Paul Shaffer

On February 28, the VECA Welcome Center hosted the latest installment of Livable Memphis’s Pizza with Planners series. Forty people, including many Vollintine Evergreen residents, gathered to learn about the neighborhood’s work using ioby (in our backyard) to fund improvement projects around the community. After an introduction to ioby’s crowd-resourcing work in Memphis and across the U.S. by Ellen Roberds, City action strategist with ioby, VECA volunteers Khara Woods, Scott McDermott, Natasha Strong, and Cathy Marcinko shared their work on ioby projects.

VECA ioby projects covered:

- Khara Woods – Headshots mural (done with her mother N.J. Woods) and Leaps and Bounds mural
- Scott McDermott – SkyCop camera
- Natasha Strong – V&E National Historic District signs campaign
- Cathy Marcinko – The Green Triangles Project

Roberds and Livable Memphis program director John Paul Shaffer also discussed other ioby projects in the neighborhood, including a mobile bocce court, two projects improving play and public space at neighborhood schools, and the purchase of tablet computers for an after-school program.

- As of this spring, ioby has helped Memphians raise over $600,000 for roughly 200 neighborhood improvement projects.
- The partnership began in 2013 with a funding campaign for the Hampline bicycle trail to connect the Shelby Farms Greenline to Overton Park through Binghampton.
- The average project budget is around $3,000

Learn more about current and past Memphis projects at ioby.org/Memphis. ioby has also created a page on its site just for VECA – visit www.ioby.org/campaign/vollintine-evergreen-community to learn more about the projects happening around the neighborhood.

Pizza with Planners is a monthly series under Livable Memphis’s community education and engagement program. Each month topical experts talk about current issues facing Memphis and urban areas around the U.S. Topics include transportation funding, blight and community development, creative placemaking*, and community and comprehensive planning. And of course there’s pizza! Learn more about PwP and other Livable Memphis programs at www.livablememphis.org.

How Residents See the Evergreen-Jackson Commercial Area

...crimes (70%); improved lighting for better visibility (68%); (continued page 11) security cameras at properties likely to have safety issues (53%); and greater police presence (43%). These responses mirror survey responses about image and attractiveness in that they relate to both physical design and occupancy concerns.

Transit and accessibility in the Evergreen-Jackson Commercial Area:
The majority (54%) of respondents thought that bike, bus transit and pedestrian safety and access in the commercial area was “okay but could be better,” while 34% said it was not bike, bus transit or pedestrian-friendly. Only 11% thought that transit and mobility options were “reasonably accessible and safe.” (Continued on page 11)

The responses to what could be done to make the area more accessible and transit-friendly were topped by a desire for better crosswalks (79%) and crosswalk signals at major intersections (67%). Improvements to sidewalks, parking lots and handicapped ramps were a close second at 68%, followed by the wish for better bus service and shelters (49%), bike lanes (47%) and bike racks at more businesses (42%).

Desired uses for vacant or under-used properties: The responses to this question may reveal that we are a community of coffee drinkers – 79% of respondents said that they wanted a coffee shop in the commercial area. A majority (72%) also wanted a small grocery store or farmer’s market, and 66% were in favor of a greenspace or public space at the vacant former gas station site for sale at the northeast corner of Evergreen and Jackson. Other uses that were less popular included office or light retail (40%), medical or dental office (27%) and community bank or credit union (29%).

Other ideas or concerns: This was by far the most interesting but hardest to summarize part of the survey. We have tried to give a taste of what people said below.

- Many wrote comments about King’s Grocery being an eyesore, with loitering in the vicinity, all of which contributes to the impression of it being a “sketchy business” and the area not being safe.
- A similar number of comments said MAPCO needed to invest in improving the gas station. Some respondents said they don’t get gas there (even though it would be convenient) because it feels unsafe and is unattractive.
- Many respondents wrote that they want to see local (including minority-owned) businesses, including ideas like pop-up shops, bar/restaurant, bakery, flea market, books and records, etc., and comments like “No fast food restaurants!” and “We don’t need another chain.” As one historic committee member observed, there is a clear preference for uses that create real identity, uniqueness and community – in short, what attracts people to live in Midtown in the first place.
- Many respondents commented about the need for more landscaping, greenspace and trees and to address litter in and around the commercial area.
- Several respondents suggested that VECA could help by organizing a business or merchants association, or by getting business development organizations like EDGE to help find investors or and venture capital. (see EDGE at: growth-engine.org)

Midtown All-Star ATA Martial Arts

Check out the new kid on the block – Midtown All-Star ATA Martial Arts. The school moved to 585 McLean in January when the lease expired at its Central Avenue location. Their loss is our gain, and the corner at McLean and Faxon is buzzing with more activity than ever.

The school is geared toward students of all ages. The youngest eligible students are 3-6 year-olds, and classes are available for adults as well. The school aims to help the kids to become aware of their surroundings and to have more self-confidence.

Midtown All-Star is partnering with Snowden School by teaching “stranger danger” and “bully prevention” to students at the school. They also offer an after-school program for Snowden students.

Midtown All-Star is offering a special through the end of April: five classes for $25, and the uniform is included. During the introductory period, if a student is interested in becoming a full member through the basic package, the registration fee will be waived.
